News item from OSLO: "The police here have arrested a Norwegian for selling "Eternal Youth" pills. Records at the Oslo police station showed he was a repeat offender. He has been similarly charged in 1452, 1799 and 1935.

Jens is on a new diet. He never eat while his wife is talking.

A Norwegian got on a TV quiz program. Said the Quizmaster, "and now for $20,000 . . . can you tell me.. HOW MANY D'S in "Here Comes the Bride?" The Norwegian scratched his head, shifted his weight from one foot to the other, gazed at the ceiling, and finally declared, "68".

"68?" exclaimed the Quizmaster. This is incorrect. But how did you arrive at 68?"

The Norwegian answered by humming, "DeDe de de.. De de de de..."

Lena was in the bathtub when the door bell rang. "Who is it?" she called out. "Blind man," came the answer from the front door. Lena got out of the tub, walked straight to the front door without so much as a stitch of clothes on, and threw open the door. There stood a man who asked, "Where do you want me to put these blinds, lady?"

An itinerant lawyer named Blaine Nels Simons was coming on a case in a rural community. When his car broke down, he was forced to borrow a horse from a country preacher, Rev. Donald Anderson. The preacher gave Simons instructions on how to make the horse go and stop. "First, you say "Praise the Lord." And sure enough, the horse took off. In fact, on a fast gallop. This startled the lawyer to such an extent that when he began panicking because of the horse's speed, he forgot the word to make him stop. Just as the horse was careening toward a cliff, and appeared about to go over the cliff, the lawyer suddenly remembered the word, "Amen". And sure enough, the horse stopped right at the cliff's edge. With a huge sign of relief, the lawyer mopped his brow and fervently uttered, "PRAISE THE LORD!"

THE GIRLS FROM CIRCLE K

By George Kisner

My name is George. I have always lived in Iowa but the last few years have come to Phoenix to escape the bitter Iowa winters. My wife Harriet, our dog Muffy and our cat Angel all travel with me in our motor home. We stop at Wal-marts, city parks and any other place that will not charge and let us stay the night. One year ago we stayed on an Indian reservation west of Yuma for a month while I got my teeth fixed in Alagones. They were supposed to charge for a fishing licence but they never came around to collect, so that was free living. We did not have electricity or water but we could fill our water tank to last one week and run our generator to watch TV or make coffee.

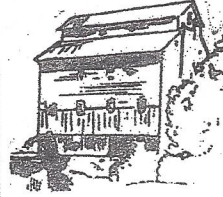

Our son, Jeff, has lived in Phoenix for the last 28 years. He needed a place to live so my wife and I bought a reasonably priced mobile home. It was in an over 55 park so we had to find a place to put it. After weeks of searching we found a lot to buy that we thought perfect in Peoria. It was littered with broken bricks and debris, but had a beautiful block wall and large enough for comfortable living. That was last year's project. This year we came out and parked our motor home next to his mobile home, plugged it into electricity and we were set for a comfortable winter. The pets delight in the fenced-in yard and the sand to roll about it. Angel does not stay inside but roams the entire neighborhood. She does chase the birds that come to the feeder I put up, but hopefully they get away.

My morning starts with a walk of 2 miles to Circle K for the morning paper. I lay the paper on the counter and carefully count out the pennies and dimes for the 50 cents. "Don't you want a cup of coffee or a doughnut this morning?" they always ask. "No," I say. "My budget will only cover the paper." "But I will take a bag to carry it home in so I can put my hand in the jacket pocket." These pleasantries continue for days and weeks and always I get the same courteous friendly greetings even though my hair is grey and my step a bit slow.

As I walk home I go into a Walter Mitty type reverie thinking of the future. The weeks will become months, the months years and the years decades. I will not be able to return to Iowa in the summer but instead just brave the Phoenix heat. My wife will no longer be able to accompany me but be confined to a nursing home. Angel and Muffy will be in the pet cemetery and be replaced by new companions. My tottering steps will barely make it to the Circle K, and I will need a rest at the playground on the way back. But the girls at the Circle K never change, they will give me friendly service and bolster my ego with their banter. It becomes my only outside contact, the morning joints.

Finally, for several days I do not appear at the convenience store. The girls comment on it for a few days and then I am the past with new customers to serve and jest with. The final segment of my fantasy shows a well dressed stranger appearing at my favorite store. He is my son from Des Moines and he tells the girls how much they have meant to his father over the years. "In fact," he tells them "He was really moderately wealthy and left in his will that each of you girls should receive a check for $10,000". No one who knows me will ever believe this bit because as everyone knows there are Wells-Fargo Banks all over so I would have taken my money with me!
